

A NEW CANADIAN JOURNAL OF ADVERTISING

MEDIA KIT
ISSUE:ONE — SUMMER 2026

REBRIEF

REIMAGINING WHAT ADVERTISING CAN BE TO FUEL WHAT'S NEXT

Rebrief is a new Canadian journal of advertising.

A print-forward, culture-driven publication created by strategists, creatives, and designers that reimagines what Canadian advertising can be. Each issue blends essays, interviews, fiction, visuals, and experiments, brought together through our signature “rebrief” process: an editorial remix that pushes ideas further.

As both a magazine and a community-building project, Rebrief brings depth, playfulness, and collaboration in a moment hungry for Canadian creativity.

FORMATS INCLUDE

- Long-form essays
- In-depth interviews
- Poetry and fiction
- Illustration and comics
- Photography
- Creative experiments

CANADIAN ADVERTISING NEEDS A REBRIEF

The Canadian advertising industry faces a critical moment. Consolidation, creative fatigue, and technological disruption have created an opportunity for ambitious reinvention.

WHAT'S MISSING?

Non-commercial, independent, platforms for playful experiments, nuanced critique, and idea-first explorations of advertising.

WHY NOW?

At a moment when creative industries are under intense pressure, we believe in immense untapped potential within the Canadian industry.

WHY PRINT?

Physical print is a luxury, an antidote to digital fatigue signaling craft and care. Rebrief is a designed piece to be collected and shared.

CARLY MILLER

Carly is a seasoned strategist that shapes brands by being a respectful sh*t disturber, challenging the status quo and solving complex problems with creativity and a stern no-BS meter.

JON CROWLEY

Jon spends way too much time thinking about advertising, and as a result has spoken on the subject at conferences in Toronto, Vancouver, Minneapolis, Sioux Falls and Budapest. In addition to being your favourite strategist's favourite strategist, he's also a Partner and the Head of Strategy at independent agency FUSE Create.

PAUL LAWTON

Paul is a brand strategist that was born out the ashes of an early career as a sociology professor, touring indie musician and record label owner. He is an adjunct professor at McMaster University and CSO at globally recognized brand-strategy boutique Sister Merci.

SPENCER MACEACHERN

Spencer is a Brooklyn-based, proudly Canadian, brand strategist. He's also a strategy instructor, mentor, and has probably bothered you about getting involved in the APG. He believes projects like Rebrief are a way to bring our incredible ad scene together.

ZOE KIM

Zoe is an award winning design director obsessed with work that surprises, helps, and occasionally stirs the pot. Her designs blend expressive craftsmanship with inventive thinking, pushing teams to reconsider what design can do and why it matters.

ISSUE ONE THEME:

WHAT IS CANADIAN ADVERTISING?

Imagine McSweeney's blended with The New Yorker if they ran essays on the cultural role of the "WestJet Miracle." In addition to over 20 creatives, strategists, and designers from across Canada, contributors for Issue One include some of the country's top advertising talent, a prominent CBC host, emerging voices in fiction.

IN THIS ISSUE:

NATIONAL IDENTITY

An exploration of Canada's creative culture and its surprising role in shaping globally recognized work.

FOUNDATIONAL MYTHS

Re-examination of iconic moments defining our industry's history, separating lore from reality.

PROVOCATIONS

Playful experiments probing tensions between ambitions, outputs, and untapped potential.

RETURN OF THE AGENCY HOUSE AD

The decline of print media means fewer agency house ads. As much as we love the annual awards videos, the house ad used to be the sharpest way an agency could pitch themselves. They also used to be the best projects.

We treat house ads as part of the Rebrief experience. We offer two sizes, a full page and small 1/12th page “classified” style ad. We truly want people to pick up Rebrief as much for the ads as the articles.

AD SPECS

How to pick an advertising agency

This is getting more and more complicated (even computers are in the act!) but still the guessing game it always was.

"You've got quite a style. If you'd ever like a job in advertising..."

We'd like to present a way to go about it, you may not have tried.

Maybe.

Talk to the insiders.

Ask some people in the agency business which agency they think does the best job.

The most provocative advertising. The least provocative service. Ask them where they'd put their own business.

The best reputation any company can have is the respect of people in its own line of business. You can't kid the troops.

J. Walter Thompson, Chicago
Amsterdam, Calcutta, London, and so forth.

WHERE YOUR SUPPORT GOES

Rebrief is an entirely volunteer-run, not-for-profit initiative. All sponsorship funds are reinvested into production and long-term sustainability of the project.

NOTE Rebrief is incorporated as not-for-profit under the name Rebrief Magazine Society. Your support is an investment in the creative community, not a commercial enterprise.

DISTRIBUTION PLAN

Our "phygital" approach blends a limited-edition physical print run with a robust digital rollout to maximize cultural impact and targeted reach.

PARTNER FIT EXAMPLES

Rebrief is an editorially-independent project.

Our ideal partner shares our commitment to creativity, independence, and craft.

Sponsorship offers unique cultural alignment with Canada's most engaged designers, creatives, strategists, and emerging voices, united by a shared commitment to building a thriving creative scene.

INDEPENDENT AGENCIES & STUDIOS

Signal commitment to Canadian creativity by aligning with a new, independent platform for Canada's established and emerging voices.

PARTNERS & PRODUCTION HOUSES

Get in front of a curated audience of highly- engaged creative and strategic talent. The most effective way to build brand with people you want to hire.

RECRUITERS & TALENT AGENCIES

For businesses whose product is craft, sponsoring a high-touch publication demonstrates commitment to the community you serve.
